FOOD & DRINK

LA DOLCE VITA New Italian eatery Bellina Alimentari at Ponce City Market offers delicious housemade pastas and curated charcuterie.

A TASTE OF ITALY Ponce City Market welcomes another promising purveyor with the opening of Italian kitchen, gourmet market, culinary club and wine bar Bellina Alimentari. Conceived by architect Tal Postelnik Baum, the 4,000-square-foot space, the largest in PCM's food hall, offers Italy-sourced sauces, pestos, pasta, olive oil and more, along with dishes including made-from-scratch pasta iterations (such as maltagliati with mushroom ragu and crispy chicken bites), soups, paninis, desserts and charcuterie. Executive Chef Dave Berry (formerly of Horseradish Grill) is helming the kitchen while Smith Hanes (The Optimist, Le Far, Watershed on Peachtree) is the brains behind the chic interiors. Head to the intimate wine bar in the back to sample vinos, local brews and Italian-inspired cocktails. Plus, Bellina's culinary club offers guests an inside look at the dough room (where breads are made fresh daily with organic flour) along with classes on wine pairings and pasta-making, with space for booking private events if you're looking for a more curated culinary experience.
